- The company remains focused on worldwide compliance in the environmental and human rights arenas, as evidenced by continued efforts in every aspect of Cartus’ business;
- The company continues to work to protect its clients’ data integrity by maintaining stringent controls, including policies and procedures in place for protection of private information, SSAE 16 certification, and Safe Harbor self-certification; and,
- Cartus remains laser-focused on the ethical behavior that unifies its policies, practices, and interactions with all of its audiences, as exemplified by Cartus’ parent company, Realogy, being named one of the World’s Most Ethical Companies for the third consecutive year by Ethisphere Institute.

Cartus also recently published its 2014 Global Citizenship Report, which is available on a microsite dedicated to detailing its various global citizenship initiatives.

“I continue to be extraordinarily proud of our company and for the generosity, involvement, and commitment of all of our employees to our sustainability efforts and results,” said Kevin J. Kelleher, Cartus president and chief executive officer. “This is part of our company culture—not only supporting our clients and their relocating employees, but also giving back to our communities around the world. This is indeed a true differentiator for Cartus.”

The United Nations Global Compact, inaugurated in 2000, is the world’s largest voluntary corporate citizenship and sustainability initiative. The organization is made up of more than 10,000 business participants and other stakeholders from more than 130 countries.

Companies that have signed the United Nations Global Compact are expected to align their operations and strategies with 10 universally accepted principles in the areas of human rights, labor, the environment, and anti-corruption.
